HUGHES WILL WIN
NEW YORK CONTEST

One Newspaper Asserts That Situation Is Clarified.

Odds Still Rest On Republican Candidate and His Position Is Safe.

EFFORT TO STAMPEDE FAILS.

Says the Chicago Record-Herald's New York correspondent:

A point has been reached in New York's spectacular political contest where it is possible to say that one of the rival candidates for governor has a distinct advantage over the other. Within the last three days the situation has clarified to a marked extent and it now shows Charles E. Hughes several lengths ahead in the race, with William R. Hearst plunging along behind, using whip and spur to overtake his adversary, and laboring against heavy odds.

With only one whole week remaining before the election, the campaign managers have turned their principal attention from the issues to the practical work of getting out the vote. At this time the people generally have made up their minds as to whom they favor for governor. The state outside the city of Greater New York has been canvassed, and the leaders know approximately what is to be expected north of the Harlem river. If all the voters go to the polls. There still is a combination of mystery and doubt regarding the vote of New York and Kings county, but both the mystery and the doubt are inimical to the political fortunes of Mr. Hearst.

A little more than three weeks ago the word "go" was given and Mr. Hughes, the Republican candidate, entered the race by no means a favorite with the politicians, despite the fact that the Wall street betting odds were in his favor. Hearst took the lead in a spirit of enthusiasm, and at various intervals since he has maintained his prestige for a few days at a time.

Hughes, however, has been the steady, unflinching figure in the contest, constantly pushing his advantage, until now he has put a good sized gap between himself and his opponent and looms up as a sure winner unless some unforeseen accident befalls before he reaches the home stretch.

His Lingerie.
(New York Press.)

A bright young fellow from the west, rich to the verge of villainy, returned from a two years' course of study, in Heidelberg and Paris the other day, and was put up at a swell New York club. His departure from our city was hastened by a telegram from Chicago, and he had to leave some of his wash behind. Yesterday a group of the club loungers were enjoying the contents of a brief note sent to the young man's sponsor. It being too good to keep, the host passed the missive along the line:

"My Dear Old Man—When the laundryman returns will you please be good enough to take personal charge of my lingerie? Some of it is real lace. The pink suit (undershirt and drawers) is genuine silk Honiton, costing me the ridiculous sum of $99. The Gobiella blue suit is real Cluny. You will recognize it by the figures of the amposaurus of the Pliocene Period. Cost me $125. I was stupid to let an ordinary washman or washwoman have these fabrics to ruin. Then there are, among other things, seven pairs of stockings made of pure Millecourt, worth $17 a pair. Naturally, I shouldn't care to lose these things. Have the janitor express all the lingerie to me at ——. Would do the same for you on a pinch."

Unfortunately Put.

"I had the good luck to be invited to dine with the King at Marlborough house when I was in London in June," said a western millionaire.

"As I didn't know how to dress the part of a royal guest I wrote to Lord Knollys, the king's secretary, and asked help.

"Lord Knollys said in his reply: 'As no ladies are to be present, trousers may be worn.'

"When I first read that sentence I said to myself:

"What kind of Neronic revels go on at Marlborough house, anyway?

"Afterwards, though, I learned that Lord Knollys only meant that at mixed dinners knee breeches were worn at Marlborough house, at stag ones the ordinary evening suit sufficed."

MR. DOOLEY'S TALK.

F. P. Dunne never wrote a better "Dooley" article than the one he publishes in the October number of The American Magazine—the periodical that he and John S. Phillips and Ida M. Tarbell and William Allen White and Lincoln Steffens and Ray Stannard Baker have bought, and taken hold of with such vigor.

This new "Dooley" article is on "The Power of the Press." It is the splendid sane brain of the great American philosopher at its best. How Peter Dunne does grow in wisdom and knowledge! How gentle his humor, how fair his thrusts!

After showing what "th' press can do for thim it loves" and "what it ca" hand to thim it don't love," after amusing reference to his colleagues, Mr. Steffens and Mr. Baker and Miss Tarbell, and to Winston Churchill and Roosevelt and others, "Mr. Dooley" says:

"No, sir, as Hogan says, I care not who makes th' laws or th' money in a country so long as I run th' press. Father Kelly was talkin' about it th' other day. There ain't anything like it an' there niver was," says he. "All th' priests in this diocese together preach to about a hundred thousand people wanst a week an', he says 'all th' papers preach to three millyon wanst a day, ave twinty times a day,' he says. 'We give hell on Sundays an' they give ye hell all th' time,' he says. 'Tis a ponderful thing,' he says, 'I see a bar' in printer's ink goin' into a newspaper office an' it looks common enough. A bar' in printer's ink, a bar' in linseed oil an' lampblack, with a smell to it that's half stink an' half perfume. But I tell ye if all th' dynamite, lyddite, cordite an' gun cotton in th' wurld wuz hid behind thim hoops there wudden't be as much disturbance in that bar' as there is in th' messy stuff that looks like so much tar,' he says. 'Printer's ink! A drop of it on wan little wurld in type,' he says, 'will blacken th' fairest name in Christendom or,' he say, 'make a star to shine on th' lowliest brow,' he says. 'It will find its way into millions of homes an' hearts an' memories, it will go through iron dures an' stone walls an' will carry some message that may turn th' current of ivy life it meets, from th' Emperor in China to th' baby in th' cradle in Hannigan's flat,' he says. 'It may undo a thousand prayers or start a millyon. It can't be escaped. It could drag me out iv me parish house to-morrow an' make me as well-known in Pekin as I am in Halsted street, an' not as favorably. Today th' pope may give me no more thought than he gives Kelly th' Rowlin' Mill Man. Tomorrow he may be readin' about how great or bad I am in th' Poppyo Romano. It's got Death beat a mile in levelin' ranks.'"

"Yes sir," says he, "th' hand that rocks th' fountain pens is th' hand that rules th' wurld. Th' press is fr th' whole universe what Mulligan was fr his beat. He was th' best policeman an' th' worst I ever knew. He was a terror to evil doers whin he was sober an' a terror to ivybody whin he was drunk. Martin, I drink to th' la-ads, all over th' wurld who use th' printer's ink. May the not put too much iv th' red stuff in it an' may it niver go to their heads."—American Magazine

WHY LIVES ARE SHORTER.

In part I of the third volume of the United States census for 1900 will be found a tabulated statement which shows in a very striking way the rise in the death rate during the decade from 1890 to 1900 for all ages from 60 up. The figures given are now six years old, and so I have brought them up to date, with the help of fresh information from Washington—a matter of no little importance, inasmuch as the increase has been marked ever since 1900. Thus correct for accuracy, the reckoning shows that since 1890 there has been this increase in the death rate for the entire United States:

For people of ages from 60 to 64, 7 per cent.
For people of ages from 65 to 69, 6½ per cent.
For people of ages from 70 to 74, 16½ per cent.
For people of ages from 75 to 79, 7 per cent.
For people of ages from 80 to 84, 15 per cent.
For people of ages from 85 to 89, 12 per cent.
For people of ages from 90 to 94, 35½ per cent.
For people of ages from 95 and up, 29½ per cent.

These figures tell the story more clearly than the most eloquent discourse on the subject. They show that, notwithstanding improved medical knowledge and the benefits of modern sanitation, we are dying earlier than our grandparents did. The reason why offers a topic for a considerable discussion and is not to be summed up in a word, but one may discover it without much difficulty in the more complex and luxurious life that we lead. The lives of our forebears were comparatively simple, and their constitutions, unweakened by the luxury and intense nervous strain of an existence like that of today, were stronger than ours and better able to withstand the approaches of disease.—John V. Shoemaker in the Reader.

NUMBERING CARS
OF PENNSYLVANIA

Confusion Now Exists All Over The Great System.

Will Require Year to Complete the Gigantic Task Now Under-taken.

WHERE TROUBLE COMES IN

To aid in the moving and taking care of its cars, which now number a quarter of a million, the Pennsylvania railroad is having them all numbered. It is a gigantic task, one that will require a full year's labor, but when the work is done there will be none of the confusion which has frequently brought grief to the Pennsylvania's car record office and to the car accountants of other roads.

Troubles arose from the fact that every one of the individual companies which go to make up the Pennsylvania system had its own car numbers. In addition to that the similarity of the legends, "Pennsylvania" and "Pennsylvania Company," often caused one name to be reported when the other should have been. In the system there might be eight or ten cars with the same number, and if the small initials of individual ownership were left out of a report there was no way of telling what car was really meant.

To the passenger cars belonging to the lines east of Pittsburgh are given the numbers 1 to 1,700 and to those belonging to the lines west of Pittsburgh the numbers 7,001 to 10,000. The freight cars are numbered from 10,001 to 500,000 on the eastern lines and from 500,001 to 999,999 on the western lines.

To make the task as easy as possible it was arranged that the largest ownership, namely, the Pennsylvania railroad proper, should carry the lower numbers. This would fall into the proper class without having to be renumbered.

The cars are to be repainted, too, but that is, of necessity, much slower work than the renumbering. There are comparatively few places where it can be done, while new numbers can be put on at pretty nearly any station where there is a small paint shop. When the repainting is done every car on the eastern lines will have the word "Pennsylvania" on the side, above the number, and the letters "P. R. R." on the end. On the western lines "Pennsylvania Lines" will be the legend for the side of a car and "P. L." for the end.
